IV 以下の英文を読んで、各設問に答えなさい。（*印の語句については、注釈を参照すること。）

Major *corporations in industries that produce clothing, food, drinks and technology services use a lot of water. However, many companies say they want to be more responsible about the freshwater they use. *Drought, floods and other extreme weather events also affect the way they do business.

The nonprofit environmental group Ceres ranked 72 companies for their *sustainability efforts. Ceres said (ア) of the companies are close to reaching the 2030 goals set by the group, which is based in Boston, Massachusetts.

Last year, Ceres started an effort to push companies with large water usage to protect water resources. Recently, the group released a study that included the corporations Coca-Cola, General Mills and Amazon.

“There’s no doubt that companies need to do (イ),” said Kirsten James. She is a program director for water at Ceres. Ceres said the companies were chosen from four industries based on their size and use of water. They were given points and ranked based on (a) several factors, including efforts to protect the amount and quality of the water they use, as well as the environments that supply it. They were also tested on whether they helped improve *availability of water and *sanitation facilities in communities where they do business.

None of the companies scored above 70 percent of the points. Some were considered to be (b) on track to meet the goals set by the nonprofit group, with scores of at least 50 percent.

Michael Kiparsky is director of the Wheeler Water Institute at the University of California, Berkeley. He said that corporations have an interest in protecting their (c) operations from water shortages. That could push them to take bigger steps to protect freshwater resources.

(注) corporation : 会社      drought : 干ばつ

sustainability : 持続可能性（環境を悪化させずに資源などを持続的に利用すること）

availability : 利用のしやすさ      sanitation facility : 下水処理施設
